

MICROCHIP Identification & Recovery Information

RECOVERY HOTLINE: 1-800-396-1896

CANADACHIP is a national pet rescue program offered by The Canadian Kennel Club. Every microchipped dog registered with the CKC is automatically enrolled in the Recovery Database.

The CKC has been assisting in the recovery of lost purebred dogs for many decades, long before microchips were ever in existence. Both the American Kennel Club in United States and The Kennel Club in England operate similar recovery programs for companion animals.

A microchip is a small capsule about the size of a grain of rice that contains a computer chip which stores an alphanumeric code that is unique and specific to the animal with the implant. The microchip is injected under the skin into the connective tissue of the puppy with a large bore hypodermic needle. It is no different than having your pet vaccinated. The process is quick and causes minimal discomfort.

Microchips are produced of biologically inert materials, and individually sterilized and packaged. They do not cause a tissue reaction and have been found to be extremely safe in both the short and long term. Early versions of the microchip had a tendency to “migrate” after implantation. Today's manufacturers have developed microchips with anti-migrating properties which has greatly reduced this potential. The microchip itself contains no internal battery. The code is deciphered by power from the scanner or reader. A microchip has a long lifespan that far exceeds the life of the animal.

Microchips provide a permanent, non-removable means of animal identification that will not fade or be lost over time as can occur with a tattoo or ID tag. Owner information can be accessed immediately through the recovery database associated with the microchip. This ensures the quick and accurate identification of a lost pet. It is a system that knows no geographical boundary and is applicable throughout North America, making it the best insurance to provide your pet in the event it becomes lost.

When a lost animal appears in a shelter, humane society, or veterinary clinic, it will be scanned for a microchip. If one is present, the specific alpha-numeric code will be displayed and the owner identified through the recovery database using the 800 toll free number.

The owner can also notify the database, veterinary clinics and shelters in the event of a lost pet. It is best to keep the number on file along with your dog's veterinary records. There is a record of all microchip numbers and contact information for every dog from Fairhill Farm. If we can be of assistance call 1-902-847-9889 for ID information and suggestions to help you recover your lost poodle.
